Flawed Study Shouldn't Be Used To Evaluate Recent Corporate Tax Break

Study by Charles W. Swenson Riddled With Data Problems, Arithmetic Errors, and Faulty Assumptions

SACRAMENTO – An analysis by the Washington, D.C.-based Center on Budget and Policy Priorities (CBPP) has found that a study authored by Charles W. Swenson of the University of Southern California is deeply flawed and shouldn't be used to evaluate the impact of a corporate tax break that would go into effect next year unless repealed by a November ballot measure.

On Tuesday at 11:00 a.m., Michael Mazerov and Robert Tannenwald of the CBPP will join California Budget Project Executive Director Jean Ross to talk about the problems with the Swenson study. The call is open only to the media.
